

Palm/Passion Sunday

Notes

1 The main act of worship on this day should have two distinctive features; a celebration of Christ's triumphal entry into Jerusalem (traditionally by means of a procession) and, more importantly, an extended proclamation and meditation on the Passion story (traditionally by the reading of the Passion from one of the synoptic gospels or John's Gospel - see the passion narrative provided).

2 The congregation assembles in a suitable place away from the church building, and goes in procession to the church building. Where this is not possible, all is done inside the church building, and if possible some or all of the congregation take part in the procession.

3 The people bring palm or other branches, palm crosses, or else they are given them as they arrive.

4 The Passion narrative may be read by three, four, or more people. When it is read in full, the sermon is normally be omitted.

5. For more details of this service see, "Book of Common Worship" Presbyterian Church USA, Westminster/John Knox Press, 1993 or "Handbook of the Christian Year", Hickman, Saliers, Stookey, White, Abingdon Press.
